"Who Has the Data I Need?"

Joanna Fulbright led this meeting in a discussion of finding the data that you need. She opened the floor for discussion about how to identify the exact information that should be gathered. She emphasized that communication is how you determine what the questioner is actually asking and whether the data you can provide is actually what they need.

Several questions were addressed:

- How will the reference room be organized, will all evidence be electronic and/or in hard copy form and how should these items be referenced in the report?
- Sample questions were discussed to encourage communication between the questioner and the person being questioned to determine the needed evidence.

Dr. Richard Dawe noted that he has seen a lot of work taking place and a lot of frustration as well but that is all part of completing the self-study. He added that this research will allow us to grow and improve dialogue.

There was a general discussion session about assessment.

Meeting adjourned at 2:15
